After working 20 years in Los Angeles and Houston within corporate America, I was entering a segment of my life that required more fulfillment and purpose. This is when I gave birth to my production company which was inspired by a need to use my talents to give back to the community. In Alignment Productions is intended to promote the greater good in society, by creating projects that raise consciousness to the level of helping those who can't help themselves without assistance and support.

I was trained as an actress in college, where I realized the magic of theater and its power to effect change. It's no secret how urgent the call is to shift world-thought away from self, towards replenishing everyone on the planet (including Mother Earth). The issues are endless and the road ahead is not for the faint of heart. If we are to survive as a global unit, we must have the courage to speak the truth and encourage others to come together and do the same.

Few people realize the difference one person can make in this world. Fewer people act on their impulse to take action and be the change they wish to see in the world. If everyone would just champion one cause, there would be significant synergy to improve on a better world for our children.

I encourage you to join forces with In Alignment Productions and be a part of the change that is so desperately needed in our world. Please visit my website to learn more, www.cheryltanner.com.
